“Yes, but what does that mean?”

One person's soda is another's pop; what we call a “dresser” you might call a “bureau.” More pertinently, you may have a “Workforce Investment Board” or a “Workforce Development Board,” but your job remains the same.

Many of the terms for the services we offer are used interchangeably to describe widely varying arrays of processes and products. Many of them overlap. We've put together this handy matrix to help you see what you might typically expect when you consult Workforce Associates, Inc. for any of the services we list.

Of course, this is just a sketch. WFA will tailor our services and products to your specific needs and requests. If you want more, less, or something completely different than what you see below, contact us. We'll tailor a service package to what your community needs – and we'll call it whatever you like.
